

Air Conditioning fair use policy

We hope that your stay at Rhakotis is a pleasant and comfortable one. At certain times of the year it can get particularly hot however we hope that the gentle breeze will help keep you cool whilst staying at Rhakotis! In addition, all rooms have their dedicated air conditioning units. These are provided free of charge by the owner and we do not charge for usage as is the case in some accommodation.

We are committed to supporting the Greek government's environmental conservation policy and we seek to comply with its. This means ensuring guest's use of the air conditioning is responsible and as a result the global warming environmental impact is minimised.

Being environmentally responsible also means that the air conditioning units run efficiently. We therefore regularly service our units. To ensure that the air conditioning units continue run efficiently during your stay there are some simple steps that we ask all guests to follow. This serves to prevent the air conditioning units breaking down during your stay and thus causing you discomfort whilst waiting for a service engineer to call out. We therefore ask that you follow the guidelines below:

Guidelines

- 1. Do not leave the air conditioning unit on whilst out of the room. Rooms do cool very quickly once the system is activated.
- 2. Do not leave the air conditioning unit on whilst away from the house.
- 3. Do not leave door open whilst the room is being cooled.
- 4. Do not leave windows open whilst the room is being cooled.

We thank you for in advance for helping is to be environmentally responsible.
